EVENT/ACTIVITY OF GUJARAT UNIVERSITY

From Vice Chancellor'S Desk

Dear friends

I am pleased to be writing this message for the latest edition of Vidyavrut, which is Gujarat University's flagship newsletter. I trust that this message finds you well, safe and healthy, in these unprecedented times that we are currently witnessing. This edition of the newsletter is a combined edition as the previous edition had to be deferred due to the outbreak of Novel Coronavirus across the country.

The ongoing outbreak and spread of the pandemic has affected everyone around the world, bringing in uncertainty for everyone in the planet. A monumental impact has been made on the economy and there hasn't been a global phenomenon such as this in the last seven to eight decades that has affected the global population like COVID-19 has.

Even so, while physical barriers due to social distancing have been created and enforced, COVID-19, in a short span of time, has already taught us numerous lessons that would equip us to do better in the coming years. The use of virtual technology and the internet for delivery of education, conducting programs, meetings, reviews, etc., for example, has been a revelation and the University has been at the forefront of it. The University has conducted close to 100 programs over the past few months, and has witnessed participation of close to 50,000 persons through virtual means.

During this time, the University has also contributed by creating innovative solutions to COVID-19 related problems, some of which are currently in the market or at pilot stage. Solutions such as alcohol free and ultraviolet based sanitising system, farm to table fresh agro produce, etc. have been deployed by many start-ups and innovators supported by GUSEC.

At this time, it is important to acknowledge that the virus will take its time to go away, and we have to learn living with the virus. It is important that all of our students, faculty members and stakeholders of Gujarat University follow social distancing, wear mask, and focus on taking care of their physical and mental well-being during this time.

I also encourage our students and stakeholders to leverage various programs conducted by University and its departments and divisions, from sessions on inspiring addresses by distinguished guests to sessions on managing mental well-being.

Stay safe, healthy and sensible

Prof. (Dr.) H.A. Pandya

From Chief Editor'S Desk

A pandemic of unprecedented magnitude has rocked the world. The respiratory illness was found to be associated with a novel coronavirus (COVID-19) which was later specifically named as “acute respiratory syndrome coronavirus 2” (SARS-CoV-2) by World Health Organization (WHO). Millions of people around the globe have been infected, and several thousands have lost their lives. Why did it happen?

Rising meat demand, wet markets and global trade are only some of the directly visible reasons of the emergence of novel zoonoses in the human population. Other important factors linked to the environment and the damage caused to it due to ever-increasing anthropogenic activities Global warming and climate change, extreme levels of pollutants in the environment (soil, water and air), deforestation, fragmentation of natural environments, intensive farming, and globalization.

Important lessons must be learned from this pandemic. These are related to our survival, preparedness, and responsibility towards nature which will lead to the control of future pandemics. Various types of shutdowns are proving to be effective not only in breaking the chain of infections but also healing of environment and ecosystems. Air and water pollution levels have come down in several regions of the globe and nature has started to reassert itself.

Let us be vigilant in our activities and to prevent such outbreaks in future.

Chief Editor
Prof. (Dr.) Meenu Saraf
